

MERCHANTS HOLD MONTHLY MEETING

The regular monthly meeting of the Daly City Merchants' Association was held at the City Hall Auditorium last Wednesday evening, with President Andrew Vireno presiding.

As was previously advertised, the N. R. A. was discussed, and Mr. J. D. Rhodes, of the United States Grocers' Association, made a most interesting and instructive talk on the "New Deal", and also spoke at length on the new Sales Tax, which the local merchants are vitally interested in.

President Andrew Vireno received a communication from the County Renovize committee, asking him to take the chairmanship of the committee for Daly City, but owing to press of other matters was unable to accept, and the matter was turned over to Mr. Henry Vujevich, of 6036 Mission street, who will give it the required attention.

The next matter that engrossed the attention of the Association was the final arrangements for the annual picnic of the Merchants' Association, to be held at Oak Cove Park, just west of San Mateo, on Sunday, August 13, at which time and place one of the largest gatherings ever seen by the people of Daly City and the county of San Mateo will be present.

This is the annual holiday for the people, the general public, a time and place for getting together, renewing friendships, and having a general good time. There will be coffee and other refreshments served, but it is to be a basket picnic, and every one is expected to bring a well filled basket. The Eagles' band will be on hand, and plenty of good music for dancing will be provided. This is the people's opportunity for a good time. Don't miss it.

The picnicers will meet at the City Hall, Daly City, not later than 9 o'clock Sunday morning, August 13. Transportation will be furnished for the band and as many others as possible.

W. H. CLAY, Recording Secretary.

GRAMMAR SCHOOLS OPEN ON AUGUST 7

District Superintendent R. L. Crane of the Grammar schools has announced August 7 as the opening date for the schools under his jurisdiction.

The buildings have been thoroughly cleaned and all of the equipment put in order. Two of the yards have been partially fenced and one yard surfaced.

A large shipment of state textbooks has been received from the State Printing Office in Sacramento and distributed to the different schools in the district.

Increased Taxes for the Heavily Taxed Citizen

The general sales tax bill became effective in California on August 1.

A study of the new tax bill shows that on articles costing less than fifteen cents there is no tax. On articles costing fifteen cents to fifty-nine cents the tax is one cent. From sixty cents to $1.05 the tax is two cents. On articles up to $1.49 the tax is three cents. The tax is increased one cent for approximately every forty cent increase in the price. An article costing $10 would carry a twenty-five cent tax. An article costing $50 would carry a tax of $1.25.

A.; Mrs. Eason, president of General Pershing P. T. A.; Mrs. Garibaldi, president of Colma P. T. A.; Mrs. Andersen, president of Woodrow Wilson P. T. A. Everyone reported a very enjoyable afternoon.

Garbage Proposal Before Board
An application from the Scavengers' Protective Union, San Francisco, for permission to dispose of garbage in San Mateo county was presented to the San Mateo county board of supervisors last Monday, and on motion of Supervisors Witt and Pool was referred to the county health officer.

CRANE CHOSEN BY EIGHTH DISTRICT

Daly City Post No. 410, American Legion, scored another victory in this year of outstanding achievements when Comrade Richard L. Crane was unanimously elected Commander of the Eighth District, at the district caucus, held in the San Francisco War Memorial, Friday, July 28. This honor comes as a reward for his untiring work throughout the district as First Vice-Commander. Prof. R. L. Crane is the popular superintendent of the grade schools in Daly City, and his selection to this important position in the American Legion movement will be hailed with gratification by his many friends.

The large gain in membership in Daly City Post, and all other Posts in San Mateo county, under Comrade Crane's leadership, aided materially in putting the Eighth District "over the top." We are confident that "our big man" will carry out his "big job."

Daly City Post wishes to take this opportunity to thank all the Posts of the district for their loyal support of our candidate.

The whist held Friday, July 28, and the social held Saturday, July 29, in Legion Hall, were well attended and every one had a good time.

The San Mateo County Council will meet in the American Legion Hall in San Bruno tonight, Friday, August 4.

The next regular meeting will be held Wednesday, August 9, in Legion Hall, 474 San Diego avenue.

One of the best reasons for the 1934 department convention to be held in San Francisco is our climate, as the thermometer registered 114 in Fresno last Friday, July 28.

At the Eighth District caucus, Friday, July 28, Comrade Sinclair reported on the National Rehabilitation committee meeting of Area E. A resolution was adopted to be presented to the Pasadena convention, embodying the following program:

1. That no war veteran disabled in the line of duty suffer any reduction of those benefits granted such veteran in the World War Veterans' Act, as in effect prior to March 30, 1933.

2. That hospitalization under Federal government auspices be afforded all war veterans not dishonorably discharged, who require hospital treatment, and who are not able to reasonably pay for their own treatment.

3. That perpetuation of service connection for all veterans properly granted such service connection under laws in existence prior to March 20, 1933, be recommended as an item of Legion policy.

4. That the benefits provided for dependents of veterans as established in the World War Veterans' Act be resumed and maintained as the government's policy, and that in no event shall widows or dependent children of deceased war veterans be without government protection. L. M. H.

Officers Waging War on Bayshore "Road Hogs"

A drive on "road hogs" along the Bayshore highway is under way on orders from Captain Paul Perussina of the county traffic force, who has assigned two additional motorcycle officers from other road patrols in the county. Addition of the two patrolmen, with orders to cite all middle of the road drivers, makes a total of five men working on the highway.

Despite a decrease of 65 per cent in accidents for the first half of this year as compared with the same period in 1932, there have been 19 persons killed in the county since January 1, most of them on the Bayshore highway, said Captain Perussina.

PRAYER IS SERMON SUBJECT IN PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

On Sunday morning Rev. John R. Stevenson will speak on the subject of Prayer in Grace Presbyterian church at the 11 o'clock hour. In the evening at 7:45 the subject of the sermon will be evangelistic, with special music. The vacation school, under the leadership of Miss Lucille Hill, will close Friday after a successful period of instruction comprising devotion and fun and craft work. This church claims to hold the record for a long vacation school for the children. No other church in the city has conducted a vacation school for almost the whole of the vacation period.

ATTORNEY RESIGNS AS BOARD ADVISER

At the meeting of the San Mateo county board of supervisors last Monday, W. H. Morrissey, who had been appointed as special counsel by the supervisors a week previous, tendered his resignation. He submitted his resignation in a statement which said in part: "As my services are only of a temporary nature, and they are no longer necessary, I therefore tender my resignation, effective as of this date."

Amendments to the new salary ordinance were approved after provision had been made for naming of clerks in charge of burial permits at Colma. Amendments were also made increasing the force in the office of Agricultural Commissioner Max Leonard, and providing for payment of extra employees at the relief home to serve during vacations of regular employees.

The board approved recommendations from S. D. Merk, of the citizens' bond relief committee, for continuing work projects as follows: The sum of $1,200 for grading Burlingame school grounds; $108 for moving comfort stations in the county Memorial park; $8,300 for a road through the park; two items for cleaning the court house, one of $18 and another of $96; $600 for clearing ditches along road at La Honda; $900 for the same work along Sneath lane near San Bruno; $300 for grading school grounds at Ravenswood; $180 for improvements to the Millbrae water system; and $1,200 for work on the grounds of the Sequoia high school and a public park at Redwood City.

Supervisors Appoint James as Roadmaster

The San Mateo county board of supervisors last Monday adopted an ordinance consolidating all road districts into one and naming County Engineer James S. James as roadmaster in charge.

Adoption of the ordinance came over the protest of Supervisor Witt, of Colma, who argued for delay, pending legal determination of that clause of the charter which orders the consolidation. Witt voted "No" on the ordinance, but the other four members of the board favored it.

The district attorney said he had received an opinion from the attorney general which held the charter specifically meant the offices of county surveyor and county engineer should be consolidated. This was the issue at which the majority of the board had balked in turning their road districts over to Engineer James.

LADIES HOME CLUB CONVENES

Several resolutions were considered to be presented at the Department convention. After the business session, Memory Unit of San Jose entertained and served refreshments.

Those attending from Daly City Unit were Mrs. June Craft, Mrs. Margaret Orr and Mrs. Catherine Foreman.

Daly City Unit No. 410 will hold its regular meeting tonight, Friday, August 4. There will be a special election, and all members are urged to be present.

Atherton's Horse Show Scheduled for Saturday

More than 400 equine prize winners from the greatest stables of California, and many other states, will take part in the show, which is scheduled to open with a matinee performance next Saturday (tomorrow), at the Menlo Circus Club in Atherton. There will be twelve performances, including matinees Sunday, August 6, Wednesday, August 9, Saturday, August 12, and a show every night throughout the week.

Several thousand dollars in prize money will also be awarded the winners of each 120 classes in the show, other than stake events, it is pointed out by Major A. Mouel-Fenton, show manager.

Balance of $134,649 in County Relief Fund

After work-relief expenditures last week, a balance of $134,649 remained in San Mateo county's $350,000 bond fund voted last year to create jobs. The county committee, with the aid of private and other public funds, aided 353 men and women last week, according to the report of Captain Edward Macauley, chairman.

PLACER MINES IN HEAVIER OUTPUT

By J. W. MARCHBANK
Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work.

Significant of the trend of production in the mines is the increase in the output of gold, while a decrease is shown in most of the other metals. Figures are available from British Columbia for the first half of this year and comparisons are in order with the corresponding period of last year.

As expected, gold production, both in placer and lode, was greater by a wide margin. The output of gold totaled $2,292,946 for the half year, as compared with $1,181,137 in the first six months of 1932, an increase of twenty-two per cent.

The calculation is made with gold at the standard price, but in addition substantial premium was paid to gold producers, averaging about twenty-one per cent. It is estimated approximately $480,000 was obtained in premium.

The placer output, estimated at $110,000, was an increase of $43,850 over that of the corresponding period of last year. The larger part of placer production is always made in the last half of the year, so that indications are last year's total of $346,800 will be exceeded in 1933.

Operatives of Waverly Tangier Mines report development with the view of early shipping. Both gold and silver come from the properties. A new financial group recently took control. "A large sum of money has been spent in the past and ore of good value sent out from the mines."

The most active gold camps are in the Bridge River area, Cariboo district, ad Nelson division. Experts say that in the Bridge River area development work has placed the Bralorne in the forefront of British Columbia gold mines. In the Cariboo district, many operations are proceeding. Cariboo Gold is going strong. Results are up to expectations, and further important ore disclosures may come before the end of the year.

Princess Royal Gold Mines has acquired a working interest in the Captain group, adjoining the Pugsley mine. The company has blanketed nearly all of the area in the district where there are known good ore possibilities. By tunneling from the Pugsley mine and cross-cutting into the Captain vein the company is assured of backs of ore sufficient to carry on operations for a number of years.

Proving of further ore reserves on the property of Georgia River Gold Mines, in the Portland Canal district, is reported by the Helena Gold Mines, which controls the property. In one of the tunnels heavily mineralized quartz has been encountered.

Rapid progress has been made at the Humming Bird mine at the head of Roaring Creek. The property is located in Ymir district of the Nelson division.

Ex-Governor to Explain Renovize Movement

With but a few days remaining before the county-wide house-to-house canvass for renovize pledges, county and community campaign leaders are working desperately to complete extensive organization.

General chairman for a dozen local committees had been named by former Governor C. C. Young, county executive chairman, with the selection early this week of Dr. E. R. Tait as chairman for North Palo Alto; Col. F. B. La Crosse for Half Moon Bay and Mrs. Dorothy Mackintosh for Salada Beach.

Young and other campaign speakers have been addressing mass meetings, club luncheons and civic gatherings in all parts of the county, urging citizens to make a united effort to reach the million dollar goal in pledges which has been set for San Mateo county.

This evening, August 4, Young will address the San Mateo County Council, American Legion, at San Bruno. Commander T. Louis Chess announced that the gathering would be a large one.

In a letter to Renovize campaign headquarters, the San Mateo County Society of Architects offered their assistance and advice to renovize pledgers in planning their remodeling and improvements.

Plans are also being laid by the county executive committee for a financial advisory committee for home owners who wish to take advantage of the present low building costs by joining in the renovizement.

VETS PREPARE FOR MILWAUKEE MEET

In looking forward to the 1933 National Encampment of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, August 27 to September 1, Milwaukee is making plans to entertain the biggest convention in history.

There are many highly important things to be taken up at this convention, and it is hoped that all Posts who possibly can will be represented at the convention. The Veteran must combine his efforts under one common banner, that the forces working against the Veteran and his family will not entirely dominate the country.

How easy it is to forget in just a few years what the disabled veteran gave that these same forces might prosper and get rich on the efforts of the "doughboy." We sometimes wonder just what the National Economy League, and organizations of its ilk, would do in order to continue their riches and worldly goods at the expense of their fellow men. We are sure that at the next convention the Veterans of Foreign Wars will be known the world over as an organization which goes places and does things.

At the last meeting of the Post, held Friday night, July 28, the usual excellent attendance was there. We were honored by the presence of Comrade Mehaney, Assistant National Chief of Staff, who brought a message of interest to all veterans. Comrade Rosendorg, Department Council of Administration member, was also present.

The degree team is making wonderful progress, the uniforms are just about completed, and it will be only a short time until they blossom out all dressed up. Old Glory Post has one of the most efficient teams in the Sixth district, and as soon as the new uniforms are at hand, Daly City will be mighty proud of this team, and we know that the advertisement received from this team will be most beneficial to the city and the organization.

It will be only just a few days until the V. F. W. signs are installed at each end of the city limits, letting the world know that Daly City is alive and has an exceedingly alive Post of Veterans.

Ladies' Auxiliary Notes of Interest

The Auxiliary met in the Eagles' Hall on Friday night, July 28, and included in the business transacted was the approval of the plan to form an Auxiliary Council in conjunction with the Post Council. The Auxiliary is behind this actively and it will be only a comparatively short time until it will be installed and operating.

Mrs. Donahue, State Chaplain, paid the Auxiliary an unexpected visit, and highly complimented our own Chaplain, Sister Jensen, on the manner in which her work was done.

The next Auxiliary whist will be held on August 22. We know that this whist will be more than successful, as it is in charge of Mrs. Louis Rafatti this month.

FRED R. LINSEY, Adjutant.

COUNTY PLANS TO CHARGE CAMPERS AT MEMORIAL PARK

County Executive Walter T. Kellogg is working out plans for making the county's Memorial Park near Pescadero, self-supporting. Kellogg said he is considering charging a fee of 50 cents for the privilege of camping at the park overnight.

The executive believes that in time this will make the place self-supporting. He said that thousands are now using the park, the majority of them residents of other places than San Mateo county, without paying anything at all. He expressed the opinion that a charge was only fair to help bear the cost of keeping up the park. No charge will be made, Kellogg added, for a day's outing.

Forty and Eight Society Dance

The Forty and Eight Society of San Mateo county, Voiture 393, will hold its regular monthly card and dance social, Saturday, August 5, in Burlingame Legion hall, at 8:30 P. M. sharp. C. E. Bettencourt is chairman. Following the games, refreshments will be served in the dining room. After that Chester's dance orchestra of South San Francisco will play until 1 P. M. and those friends of the society that cannot be present for the card games are invited to come at 10:30 and enjoy dancing until a late hour. This is a monthly affair and is held on the first Saturday of each month.

Son Finds Father Dead

Egbert Alexander, Sr., was found dead in bed at the home of his son, Egbert Alexander, Jr., of Burlingame, when the son returned Sunday from a short vacation trip. The senior Alexander is believed to have died on Thursday from natural causes.

RIM OF TAHOE ROAD DEDICATED SUNDAY

Heralding a new scenic route for motorists, the Tahoe Rim-of-the-Lake Drive will be dedicated next Sunday (August 6) with ceremonies at Panoramic Point, reports the California California State Automobile Association. The drive around the famous Sierra lake is expected to become one of the most popular of the west's many word renowned trips for motorists, according to the Lake Tahoe-Sierra Association, which will conduct the dedication in co-operation with the United States bureau of public roads. The scene of the ceremonies will be in a national amphitheater about half way between Brockway and Glenbrook.

For the past several months the bureau of public roads has been engaged in modernizing the former "missing link" in the circuit of the lake. This section is a stretch of about twenty miles between Brockway and the Clear Creek highway summit above Glenbrook. Prior to this improvement work the road was steep and narrow, with many sharp turns. On the California side of Lake Tahoe good road conditions have prevailed for a considerable time. The improved section now makes possible a comfortable drive encircling the entire lake, with nearly a hundred miles of unsurpassed views.

The Bank of America Installs 40-Hour Week

The Bank of America, with a total personnel of 6,000, has completed plans for instituting the 40 hour week for all employees covered by the NRA re-employment plans provisions and has filed with the San Francisco Post Office a certificate of compliance with President Roosevelt's campaign to shorten working hours and spread employment.

This action climaxed a program instituted by the bank on July 21, when A. P. Giannini, chairman of the board, urged President Roosevelt that the Bank of America was in complete accord with the re-employment plan announced on that day.

A general order has been dispatched from the head office of the bank in San Francisco, directing the heads of 410 branches throughout the state to place the 40 hour week in effect on August 1. The hours during which the banks will be open are not altered by the order, in accordance with the President's re-employment agreement.

TIOGA PASS OFFERS MOST THRILLING TRIP

Many motorists who drive to Yosemite Valley each year have never seen one of the most spectacular parts of the Park—Tioga Pass. Some of the most awe-inspiring mountain scenery in the High Sierra is to be seen on a trip over the pass, which is within a day's drive of the bay area, according to L. L. Norris, Touring Director of the National Automobile Club.

Tioga Pass is a mountain road. Its highest elevation is 9,941 feet and heavy grades are to be encountered, whether you approach it from the east or the west. It is not advisable to the nervous or timid driver, but to those accustomed to the mountains, there is no trip more beautiful.

The average motorists make the trip from east to west, i.e., from Mono Lake to the Valley, in order to have the advantage of the inside of the Leevining Grade, which, up until the last year or two, was a one-way road, with very precipitous drops from the side of the road. The United States Bureau of Public Roads has spent many thousands of dollars on this route, with the result that it is now two-way, with the exception of the last two miles to the summit, which have not yet been widened.

Here, some very narrow stretches are to be traversed. The eastbound trip offers a bit more scenery, but the westbound affords a greater feeling of security and safety.

The road is in fair condition, although there are a number of stretches where a grader could be used to advantage, as the surface is somewhat rough, chunky and corrugated. After reaching the end of the Leevining Grade, there is a good gravel road leading around Ellery Lake, one of the very lovely lakes in this vicinity, and continuing to the summit and Park Boundary. The checking station is located here. It is open from 6 A. M. to 9:30 P. M. No cars are permitted to enter or leave the Valley before or after these hours. There are a number of up and down grades, necessitating second gear and possibly some low gear driving. While portions of the road are narrow, there are numerous passing places.

An abundance of clear, sparkling streams, mountain lakes, vast forests of pine and fir, combine to make this one of the most enjoyable trips in the State.

EXCELLENT FISHING AT VIRGINIA LAKES

One of the most scenic sections in the High Sierra country is Virginia Lakes, a group of ten beautiful mountain lakes within a radius of one mile of Virginia Lakes Camp, five of which are less than fifteen minutes' hike from the camp. All of these lakes are heavily stocked with gamey trout, including rainbow, eastern brook, cutthroat, loclaven, steelhead, and golden trout. The fish range from 8 inches to 8 pounds, according to L. L. Norris, touring director of the National Automobile Club.

Situated at an elevation of 9,000 feet, these lakes are easily accessible by automobile, being but five miles from the Reno-Mono Lake highway. With the exception of the first one and five-tenths miles, where a few grades are to be encountered, the road is level and winds through stately pine forests.

Little Virginia Lake, on the shore of which is located Virginia Lakes Camp, is exquisite. Surrounded by snow-capped peaks, it vies in beauty with many places in the Canadian Rockies. Snow is to be found here the year 'round. The days are warm and the nights are cool and crisp, inviting one to sit around the camp fire and listen to the talk about the experiences of the day.

Accommodations, from de luxe cabins to housekeeping accommodations and camping sites are available.

Grapefruit and orange production in the world has increased ten-fold in the past forty years.

"ROAD HOG" TARGET OF SAFETY CAMPAIGN

"Keep to the right and be right." Adopting this phrase as a slogan expressing the spirit of a statewide effort throughout the month of August, the California committee on public safety will carry on an intensive campaign against the practice of some motorists familiarly known as "hogging the road." With the co-operation of law enforcement officials, the committee will conduct a variety of activities aimed to impress motorists with the danger and discourtesy of "road hog" driving.

One of the most frequent violations of the California Vehicle Act is that of driving in the center of the highway, declares a statement by the committee announcing the campaign. The statement points out that the "road hog" often figures as the direct cause of serious traffic accidents by forcing other motorists to drive on the wrong side of the road in order to pass, and also is the cause of unnecessary traffic congestion.

Many motorists, the statement observes, are frequently guilty of this offense without apparently realizing that they are violating the law.

The public safety department of the California State Automobile Association, which is assisting the committee in its campaign, is calling attention to provisions of the California Vehicle Act which make it unlawful to drive in the center of the road. The law requires that upon all highways of sufficient width, other than one-way roads, a vehicle must not only be driven on the right side of the road but as close to the right hand edge of the roadway as is practical.

Exceptions are made where the right of the road is out of repair and for that reason impassible, or when overtaking and passing another vehicle, or when preparing to make a left turn.

Former Baseball Star Appointed Postmaster

Harry Hooper, one of the real stars of baseball, according to rumors has been appointed postmaster at Capitola, where the former great world's series star, and former St. Mary's college ball player now resides.

Harry Hooper was a sterling member of one of the greatest outfields of all times. Hooper, Duffy Lewis and Tris Speaker guarded the outer defenses for the Boston Red Sox along about 1915.

DEER SEASON OPENS

The deer season in the coastal areas comprising Districts No. 2, 2 1/2 and 3, extending from the northern boundary of Mendocino county to the southern boundary of Ventura county, opened on August 1. Te reports of game wardens through these areas to the Fish and Game Commission indicate that with one possible exception, in Ventura county, deer conditions are on a par with last year.

CAN'T HELP GETTING BARGAINS

It is an ancient belief that the woman is the bargain hunter of the family, and that man must be dragged reluctantly, if at all, to where goods can be purchased cheaply.

If that is true, the man of the family must be having a good time now, for there is little else but bargains, at prices unheard of a few years ago.

These prices won't be with us much longer—economic law doesn't allow "distress" sales to go on forever. Everything from shirts to cement is going to cost more very soon, as higher price and wage levels will be on us before we know it.

It's about the last chance to buy needed household articles, and make property improvements and additions, at depression costs. The chances are that you, the reader of this, have been lax about keeping up your house and grounds, in order to save. But you had better start building and repair work now, if you don't want to dig deep into your pockets in the near future.

Providing jobs and purchasing power is better and cheaper than charity.

COPPER IS COMING BACK

It was recently announced that one of the largest copper producers, which has the advantage of operating some of the lowest-cost mines in the world, was showing profit. Improvement was likewise apparent in a subsidiary company which fabricates the red metal into electrical fixtures, cables, etc.

If profits return to the copper industry as a whole, it is going to mean much to the country. It will mean employment, tax payments for government, stimulated purchasing power in a dozen states which will be reflected throughout the nation. For some time copper has been faced with a shrinking market and profitless prices. All of us feel the ill effects of such a condition in this industry.

Every industry and every person needs copper for many purposes. The mining states should do everything in their power, through friendly legislative and tax policies, to help the industry readjust itself to the changed conditions.

RENOVIZE CAMPAIGN SHOULD AID COUNTY

Editor's Note: This is the last of a series of articles by former Governor Young explaining the "renovize" campaign, and published for the benefit of readers of this newspaper. Previous articles have explained the meaning of "renovize" and the San Mateo County campaign plans.

By C. C. YOUNG

The Renovize San Mateo County campaign drive for "renovize" pledges will be definitely launched in a few days.

With the central county organization working diligently, sixteen local committees have been formed. The work has been mapped out to the smallest detail. The whole county has been charted and divided into small blocks to be assigned to individual campaign workers.

But this campaign is no small or uncertain undertaking. It is estimated that approximately five hundred solicitors, men and women, will be needed. The number of contacts to be made by each worker is small, but every property owner in the campaign area must be reached.

Charity is not what is wanted, and the public is not asked to donate. Sound economic expenditures constitute the need of our county and our nation today. It is this type of expenditure which is advocated by the renovize program.

Money spent for renovizing is money that must sooner or later be spent to prevent the wasting away of the property owner's investment. By modernizing, repairing, and remodeling NOW, tremendous savings will be made because of the abnormally low costs prevailing. You will not only be buying something you need at a low price, but you will, by acting now, be an influence for business recovery.

The so-called "pledges" which property owners, mortgagors, and lessees will be asked to sign are not binding obligations. They are declarations of intention to make prudent and necessary expenditures in the near future. They are not even promises to have work done. And if future circumstances make fulfillment of the pledge impossible, there is no penalty.

The signers will be asked to indicate on the pledges the type of work they contemplate and the approximate amount of money which will be spent on the improvements.

At the present time an extensive educational program is being carried out. These articles are a part of that program.

Every available means of carrying the renovize message to the public is being used. The backbone of this part of the campaign is—as it must be in any large advertising or publicity program—the newspapers.

However, the radio, mail enclosures, billboards, window displays, and other methods will be used.

As a check for this far-reaching educational work, the pledge canvass is being made.

The signer of a renovize pledge need have no fear that he will thereafter be embarrassed by a stream of high pressure salesmen. The pledges are absolutely confidential—and only the total number of pledges and the amounts pledged will be published, unless a pledger specifically consents to the publishing of his name.

The aim of this renovize campaign is to sell an "idea"—RENOVIZE NOW. Each property owner must do his own buying and his own contracting, when and with whom he will.

A factor in the success of the campaign is that business be stimulated in the normal trade channels. The renovize leaders, therefore, urge you to call in your painter, carpenter, plumber, builder, landscape designer, or general repair man. You are urged to go to your own merchant and building material man for your supplies. But for the benefit of all who live, work, or own property in this county, let your contract—buy your materials in San Mateo county.

Whether your economic "stake" in this county is large or small, you have a definite interest in the "Renovize San Mateo County" campaign. The movement merits the support of every citizen.

Discuss with other members of your family tonight appropriate and needed renovating about your home, so that you will be prepared to sign a pledge card when approached by a campaign worker.

If opportunity permits, join the campaign forces. Your services are needed in the most comprehensive move yet made in California to revive business. Those who are able to contribute their services may get in touch with the "Renovize Campaign Committee," P. O. Box 245, San Mateo.

New Jail Nears Completion

San Francisco's new county jail on the Sneath ranch, Skyline boulevard, will be ready for occupancy in a year, it was estimated last week by William H. Worden, San Francisco public works director. Friday he announced that a saving of over $25,000 has been made in the last contract.

UNDERTAKING THAT WARRANTS ENTHUSIASM

Before it begins, it is evident that San Mateo county's campaign to give business a "shot in the arm" is to be carried on with a degree of efficiency and enthusiasm heretofore unapproached.

Under the banner "Renovize San Mateo County," five hundred volunteer workers will canvass the entire county and impress upon every householder and property owner that he as a loyal citizen and good business man should spend now what he must eventually spend to preserve the property he owns. NOW—because prices are lowest in fifteen years. NOW—because by concerted action at this time county leaders believe trade generally will receive such an impetus as to place the county in the lead in the national movement toward business revival.

It is believed that practical civic leaders will back the movement; that the local merchant looks toward the results it will bring with confidence; and that property owners readily recognize the soundness of the economic principles upon which the campaign is based.

This Renovize movement is a commendable undertaking of broad significance—and it warrants your most enthusiastic support.

FIGHT ON RACKETEERS

War on racketeers has been declared by the Crusaders, an organization of militant young men between the ages of 21 and 45, and claiming a membership of about 1,250,000. This body was first formed to agitate for the repeal of national prohibition, and now that it believes this fight is won, racketeering will be the next target.

According to the Crusaders' chief, Fred G. Clark, the first battle will be against corruption among officeholders. He recently said: "The political racketeers, including corrupt politicians and self-seeking public officeholders in the Federal, state and municipal governments, must be removed and replaced by honest representatives of the people before racketeering can be wiped out of this country."

He added that nothing can accomplish this but a powerful organization of patriotic Americans, who by force of numbers can eliminate the grafters from public office. The Crusaders contend that rackets can be broken up by responsible government, and that responsible government can be secured by the courageous efforts of an alert, independent and unselfish minority.

SUPREME TEST AHEAD

Events are moving swiftly to the time when President Roosevelt and the "new deal" will be put to the supreme test, and the people generally are hopeful that the outcome will be favorable to the administration and the country at large.

The powers granted the President by Congress, and the program undertaken, are so vast as to almost stagger the imagination. These involve practically control of all business and industry, including agriculture. They really embrace such a radical departure from former American ideas and practices as to constitute a social revolution if the powers granted to governmental agencies are actually used to their full extent.

In view of this, it is only natural that many thoughtful persons look upon this program with some misgivings, although they see the necessity for a change in the conditions which have prevailed.

So far, business and industry generally have shown a disposition to co-operate with the administration in the evolving of a solution of the many pressing problems which exist. But such radical changes in the national set-up as are proposed can hardly be made overnight without working additional hardships on many individuals and business units.

The arbitrary fixing of hours of labor, wages and prices of commodities is an experiment of the most far-reaching nature. No one knows positively how it will work out. But we shall soon see. And all loyal Americans are hoping it will work out to the best interest of all the people.

A $616,750 WORD

An unusual lawsuit in which $616,750 was involved, and which hinged on the construction to be placed on the single word "whom", was recently decided by the New York supreme court. By the decision twenty-one charitable and religious institutions will benefit to the extent of the amount named.

The case arose over the will of Mrs. Hannah Lydig, in which a number of direct bequests were made to persons, and also to institutions. Then it was directed that after the specific provisions of the will had been carried out, the residue of her estate was to be divided in the same proportions among those "to whom I will and bequest the same."

It was contended by the lawyers for the personal heirs that the word "whom" could not apply to a corporation or institution, but only to individuals. Those representing the charities asserted that the word was not restricted to human beings, and elaborate briefs were submitted upholding their view.

The court ruled that under the circumstances surrounding the case, and the evident intent of Mrs. Lydig to give the larger portion of her estate to the institutions named in her will, hair-splitting over the construction of a four-letter word would not be permitted to deprive the charities of the sum she had left them.

Which seems to have been a just and wise decision by a judge who can take his grammar or leave it alone.

THE OTHER HALF

Many automobile drivers who think they know all about the right-of-way law understand only the half of it. In answer to this question, "Who has the right-of-way?" the average driver would quickly reply, "The man on the right." The answer is partially correct, but isn't complete.

The best statutes on the subject say: "The car on the right has the right-of-way provided it enters the intersection first, but if the car on the left happens to be first into the intersection, the car on the right must yield."

A noted traffic authority says the best way to eliminate confusion on this point is for all cars to slow down when approaching intersections. In this way drivers will be able to gauge each other's distance and obey the law with greater convenience.

The driver of a car approaching from the right has no justification to suppose that all traffic must stop to permit him to cross. This attitude has produced a high toll of accidents. More than twice as many accidents occur at intersections as between intersections. Last year 2,340 persons were killed and 184,750 injured in 146,500 accidents resulting from misunderstandings over the right-of-way.

State laws should be clarified in order to coincide with common sense and the free flow of traffic. If this is done, another bad hazard will be eliminated. Meanwhile, motorists, slow down at intersections.

WASTEFUL FOREST FIRES

In spite of all precautions, last year was one of the most disastrous in history in forest fire losses. Nearly 6,000 separate fires occurred in national forests alone, destroying timber worth many millions of dollars, covering an area of more than 840,000 acres.

The problem of reducing these losses is a most difficult one. Much money is being spent in providing forest rangers, lookout stations, airplane patrols, and other means for detecting and extinguishing incipient fires, but under conditions of extreme drought, such as obtained last year, these seem unavailing.

Still, nearly all of these losses are caused by the carelessness of tourists and others, who fail to exercise caution in the disposition of burning matches, cigar and cigarette butts, and in putting out camp fires before leaving them.

Most fires, in forests and elsewhere, are caused by indifference and negligence, which it seems impossible to overcome.

BRIDGE FIEND TEST

Considering the great spread of the bridge-playing industry, it is strange that none of our legislators has had any laws passed for its regulation. Now comes a suggestion that players be compelled to pass an examination before being licensed to indulge in the game.

The suggestion comes, not from a United States Senator, but from an editor, whose zeal for the public welfare has been aroused by a report from Kansas City, where a wife shot her husband. The victim was also the lady's bridge partner, it appears, and when he bid one spade and another player plunged on a different suit the wife raised to four spades. The husband was set, blamed the wife for reckless bidding, and as a result of the argument she shot him.

Now, the aforesaid editor asserts, all persons who aspire to play bridge should be caused to pass a rigid test, not with reference to their skill, but to determine their mental poise. If the applicant is unable to be set or have an ace trumped without showing undue emotion, a license should be denied.

The trouble is that such a law, if enforced, would practically eliminate all who take the game seriously.

WE BACK UP

—This statement with facts: that statistics from the Census Department shows that the average number in an American family is four and one-fifth. We wonder if the one-fifth is father.

Another statement we'll back up is: that if we do the repair work on your car that it won't be done like a schoolboy washes his ears—we'll make a thorough job of it; and when we start on your job we don't waste our time looking for a wrench and then try to find a nut to fit the wrench.

"TWENTIETH CENTURY" TO BE PRESENTED AT THE CURRAN

Eugenie Leontovich, with Moffat Johnston and other members of the original New York company of thirty-five, will be passengers of "Twentieth Century" when it roars and whistles into the Curran Theatre, San Francisco, next Monday evening, August 7, for a two week engagement, immediately following the run of that great operetta success, "Music in the Air."

"Twentieth Century" promises to unload the largest shipment of hilarity and fun ever received in San Francisco. This will mark the second stop of this riotous crack-comedy hit in its transcontinental trip, after closing a few weeks ago in New York City.

The entire action of the comedy takes place on the De Luxe Express train as it burns up the rails at 60 miles an hour between Chicago and New York—the plot and dialogue matching the speed of the train in originality and humor.

The gala opening at the Curran next Monday night will mark Miss Leontovich's second appearance on the Pacific coast since her triumph in "Grand Hotel", which ran for two solid years in New York and established her as one of Broadway's leading stars. Her performance of Lily Garland, the temperamental eccentric actress of "Twentieth Century", which role she created in New York, is said to surpass even her superb characterization in "Grand Hotel."

Other members of the original New York production, which will be seen in San Francisco, include Matt Briggs, Etienne Girardot, Joseph Crehan, James Spotswood, Ray Roberts and about thirty others.

SYNOPSIS

With his yacht, the Intrepid, abandoned by its crew, Felix Horton, millionaire, with his mother, his daughter Nan, and Roy Stuart, puts into Squaw Harbor, Alaska, to recruit. Failing to secure sailors, he engages a bunch of nondescript strangers there. A gigantic Pole, Sandomar, is their leader. Captain Waymire, the Intrepid's skipper, is an old friend of Eric Erlessen, unemployed sailor, and he engages to sail as chief officer. Nan and Eric indulge in a moonlight flirtation, which brings them both to the threshold of love. The Intrepid is wrecked by one of Sandomar's crew. Eric takes command of a small boat, with Horton and his party. Unable to help, they watch Sandomar kill Captain Waymire and leave the ship with his crew. Waymire has thrown Eric a revolver. On landing, Eric learns there is no communication with the outside world. Fireheart, priestess of the island, descended from a white man in the remote past, knowing a little English, welcomes the castaways. Sandomar declares there shall be no law on the island, but Eric, having the only gun, crows him for the time, declaring he is the law. He lays out work for all, whites and Indians alike. Nan faces the situation bravely. Eric's love for her swells, and he tells her he means to win her for his mate, despite all obstacles. She is not unwilling. Fireheart claims Eric as her own, and realizing the importance of her friendship he is forced to temporize. Defending himself from attack by Sandomar and one of his gang, Eric's revolver apparently misfires.

CHAPTER VI

To all intents and purposes Eric was finished. He had not time to dodge or grapple with his enemy . . . yet he lived on! It was not a miracle from Beyond, but something hardly less strange and awe-inspiring—the workings of hidden natural laws on men and minds.

The same degeneration in Sandomar's brain that gave him his gorilla strength and savagery had afflicted him with deafness—perhaps by Nature's scheme of checks and balances. He could see, but he could not hear. Now he saw the lethal glare in Eric's eyes, but he did not catch the click of the hammer.

He did not know that Eric had already tried in vain to kill him and was now at his mercy. Instead he thought that he himself was close to death. And he dared not face the great dark! He believed his only hope was to beg quarter. Perhaps Eric would yield to that strange impulse to temporize that afflicts even the strongest men. True, there was no time to think, he acted on instinct in the twinkling of an eye. With his great strength he stopped the club in mid-air, then swung it aside. Before it struck the ground his huge ape-arms were towering in surrender over his head.

In the meantime, where was Garge? He was not deaf—he had heard the gun click—and now was his chance to hurl his stone. But the trouble was that his strength lay wholly and utterly in Sandomar. The jackal can run and slash when the quarry is held fast in the tiger's claws, but when the killer turns tail, he must put his own between his legs and howl. Garge's hand started to draw back, but the sight of Sandomar's great paws in the air made the iron in his muscles melt and run out. His arm dropped slack to his side.

He could not pass a signal to his mate. Sandomar's yellow eyes were locked on Eric's face. Presently the chance had gone by. Eric had backed swiftly away: only a lucky throw could down him now. One stinging curse cracked slowly from Sandomar's gray lips; then he wheeled and strode rapidly toward the village.

The next thing Eric knew he was crouching in the half-dark of his turf-house, the door closed and barred. He was aware of sharp nausea.

Not yet could he learn the full truth. His fumbling hands and staring eyes could make no adequate examination of the defective revolver. It was an old-style weapon with a solid breach. Rattling his faculties, Eric unscrewed the little ramrod from below the barrel, and turning the cylinder, pushed out the cartridges one by one. Presently he found one dented in the rim by the firing pin. And now the grim truth was plain.

The gun held six shells. Five of these, including the failure, were new and bright, made for modern center-fire revolvers. But this weapon was rim-fire, and not even a gunsmith with his tools could change the mechanism so that it could discharge center-fire cartridges. Captain Waymire or some other previous owner of the piece had made a simple and common mistake for which Eric and his friends might now answer with their lives.

Only one of the six shells was rim-fire, a left-over from some former gunplay or target practice. It was old, its brass somewhat corroded, and of doubtful value, but it was the only remaining rampart against death, dishonor, and unconscionable disaster. With cool and steady movements Eric began to put the dummy loads back in their chambers. The lone rim-fire cartridge was the last—grimly he turned the cylinder until it was in position to fire. Then he unbolted the door and pushed out into the fading day.

Roy and DeValera hurried forward to meet him, suppressed excitement on their faces. "There seems to be some trouble brewing," Roy began. "Sandomar and Garge came in very excited, and rounded up their gang. They acted mighty bold, and Garge hinted to DeValera of a big jamboree tonight. Have you any idea what's got into them?"

Eric did not answer, but looked keenly into the Irishman's dark, narrow-set eyes. "What time did he say the row was going to start?"

DeValera hesitated briefly. "He didn't tell me. He knows I'm with you fellows. But I was just suggesting to Mr. Stuart that unless you're mighty confident, perhaps we ought to make a compromise—"

"Compromise with the devil!" Eric's tones were rough. "I'll decide what's to be done, and don't need any suggestions. Now go and help the natives with today's catch."

DeValera's right hand went up in a half-salute before he remembered that he was no longer before the mast. At once he turned to obey.

"It seems to me you're a little bit high-handed," Roy said quietly. "Our position isn't so good that you can risk antagonizing DeValera. He's one of our party—"

"Do you trust him?" Eric broke in.

"As far as I can trust anybody in this mess."

"We want only those who'll stick through thick and thin. The rest will do more harm than good. And I don't want DeValera to know our plan of battle."

Roy's hand was perfectly steady as he lighted a smoke. "You think there'll be a mutiny tonight?"

"A good one. They think they can kill me or bluff me out. They may do one, but it's too late for the other. Now get Horton and the rest, and bring 'em here."

A moment later Eric gazed into the tense, pale faces of his friends. His first question, shot between hard lips, raised the short hairs on their scalps. "Nan, can you row?"

Her answer came quick and clear. "Pretty fair."

"Mother Horton, can you? Even a little?"

"I used to, as a girl. I'll do my d—dest, if that's what you mean."

"What are you getting at, Eric?" Horton gasped. "I must know at once."

"There may be some trouble tonight. If I'm killed, as many of you as can must leave the island. Don't ask me where you'll go. I know there'd be only one chance in a hundred of getting through the reefs alive—but that's a better chance than to stay here at Sandomar's mercy."

"I'm not so sure of that," Roy's tones came cold and gray through the cold, gray dusk. "We might be able to persuade him and his crew—"

"For God's sake, Roy, believe me! You can't trust them a minute, much less this whole night." The tide of his courage, for the moment running out, surged up again. "They won't likely make trouble until nearly dark, and as soon as the light fails, I want you to be ready to go. You three women will leave the fire and say you're going to bed. Horton, you go with them. At once circle back to the beach and ship the boat ready to shove off on a second's notice. Put in it every oar and paddle you can find—from all boats—so they can't follow you until you've got a good head start; put in water and blankets, too. Then watch there in the dark until the danger's over—or until I go down."

"Until you go down?" Nan echoed slowly. "You mean you're going to try to stand them off alone?"

"If they can be stood off at all, I can do it alone. For others to stay won't help my chances, and will only throw away lives. And it wouldn't delay the pursuit more than a minute or two—taking all the oars'll handle that—and the more of you to row, the better chance you'll have of getting through the reefs."

"I think that's true," Roy said. "There'd be only a chance in a hundred at best."

Nan looked at him strangely. Then, to Eric: "When we see you fall, we're to steal away. Is that it?"

"Get away quietly if you can. In any case—get away! Roy and Wilcox better stay by the fire almost to the last, to keep the gang from getting on to your plan, but when they see the jig's up, they can duck, shove you off, and pile in with you. Row as fast as you can. They'll not get started right away, and I'll lose you in the darkness. You'll probably be drowned in the morning, but the hundredth chance remains."

Horton's gray face suddenly turned dark red. "I'm going to stay! It's my daughter and my mother, and by G—d, I can help fight for them!" His gaze grew fixed, and his voice began to break. "They—they don't need me in the boat—and if they get to civilization—they can draw on—my account—"

He did not see Nan's eyes fill with tears, but he saw Eric nod his head. "You can stay if you like. It may give the others a little more chance."

"I'll stay, then. It's my place—and I'm not afraid of death."

"Why need anyone stay?" Nan demanded. "Why can't we all steal off—now?"

"It may not be necessary for anyone to go," Eric answered. "Remember, it's practically suicide. And I'm not licked yet by a long shot. I mean to fight to the last ditch, kill as many as I can, and I may scare out the rest. Under no circumstances are you to run the risk until I go down."

"Never fear for that," Mother Horton said. "We know where our bread's buttered."

"How about trying to line up the Aleuts?" Nan asked.

"It can't be done on such short notice, if at all. I know 'em, they'll just stand and stare. If they took part at all it would be on Sandomar's side."

The silence fell again. At last Nan turned quietly to Roy. "What are you going to do?"

"I'm going to do the rational thing, try to get away in the boat and save your life," Roy answered calmly. "To stay here and fight would be a gesture, an empty piece of folly, that, thank God, makes no appeal to me."

"How about Eric? Is it a piece of folly for him, too?"

"It's his own funeral. This is his show, first to last, and he apparently enjoys it. His way is not my way. And when he gets himself killed off, I'd favor our turning back to the island in the dawn, when the men's heads are cool, and making terms with them."

A shadow that might have been terror swept across Eric's face. His arms rose, then fell to his side. "Nan, will you make me a promise?" he asked tensely.

"What is it?"

"Will you swear that if Sandomar wins and you have to go, that you'll never turn back? That no matter what happens, storm or hunger or thirst, you won't let Roy bring you back? That you'll jump overboard first?"

The fading light showed Nan's countenance calm and strong, her long eyes bright with tears. "I promise, Eric."

"And I'll stand by her," Mother Horton said. "If they return, it will be over my dead body."

Eric could only nod his thanks. "Then all of you buck up and get busy. Don't show any fear—act the same as always—only be ready. And I think we'll all come through all right."

The group broke up and sauntered back to the cooking fire. It was only a moment later that Sandomar and his henchmen came tramping over the bluff, their figures dark and ominous against the twilight sky.

Eric had given orders for the safety of passengers and crew: from now on, he alone must plot the course and turn the wheel. Cool-headed seamanship would be needed tonight. Why shouldn't he push the quarrel himself, shoot one of them, and cow the rest? Perhaps it was the best, the only way out; to hesitate might be a fatal mistake. But Eric could not drive himself so far. Strong arguments arrayed themselves adverse. In the first place, the gun might misfire again; he had little real confidence in the old, corroded rim-fire shell in the chamber. His one cartridge spent, he would hold in his hand naught but an empty tube of steel set in a stick. On the contrary, a cold strong bluff might save him and his powder, too.

If he were forced to shoot, who would be his victim? It was not as simple a question as it seemed. If the tiger dropped, the jackal might go mad, rushing in with that awful frenzy of little, cowardly things. It would seem wise to destroy Garge, and thus crush Sandomar beneath a wall of silence. Yet again Eric's instincts triumphed. Sandomar was his own and Nan's arch enemy; if Eric must fall, the jungle-beast must lie beside him.

It would not be long now. The gulls were wailing the day's departure; the sea was one purple shadow blending into dusk. Horton rose, spoke in unsteady tones of being tired, and with the three women, left the firelight. Sandomar watched hungrily until they vanished in the shadows, but he made no attempt to follow, doubtless consoled by the thought that, when he needed them, he would find them in their turfhouse. Evidently he had no suspicion of the real truth.

A half hour passed. Sandomar's men shifted uneasily, appearing and disappearing through the ring of firelight. Presently Eric beckoned Roy up beside him.

"You can't help me here," he murmured. "Take a circle around and see how they're coming on with the boat. Before you go, caution Wilcox to be ready to duck as soon as the fireworks begin. It may be any minute now."

Presently he and Wilcox were left alone with his enemies—unless he counted DeValera as a friend. The squaws, including Fireheart, drifted off a few at a time. Finally only Chechaquo and three or four of the hunters crouched in the shadows.

"Chechaquo, if I get in a fight will you help me out?" Eric asked, smiling, when his interpreter passed nearby.

The old Aleut shook his head heavily. "Chechaquo, he fight walrus, he fight whale, sometime he fight Aleut, but he no fight white man. Mighty bad luck to fight white man. Old men tell me so, long time ago."

The fire burned low; the shadows trooped in bolder. Eric could no longer keep track of all his foes. If they must strike at all, he implored that it might be soon.

Presently the wall of night parted to let through a slim figure in a white parka. It was Nan—coming back. The red firelight showed the gloss of her hair, the soft sheen of her dusky skin, the luster of her eyes.

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart

Washington.—Reminiscent of the stirring days of 1917, leaders in the nation are calling for patriotic support.

Rallying for New War
speakers are abroad in the land with a call for united effort, posters flap from the walls of public places, all in a new war. But this war being conducted by our government and its people is a war to release the country from the bondage of an economic enemy, a final gigantic drive to restore a people to the plane where happiness can replace destitution, where steady employment can replace idle time and where profits will appear instead of bankruptcy.

The government, through President Roosevelt, is calling upon all and sundry to stand together again just as firmly as they did about this time of the summer of 1917. Instead of the draft of men, however, the government is asking only that employers of labor, those who manufacture things to sell, those who engage in business of any kind, conform to certain rules. Those who buy the things that are produced by labor are asked to help in the cause by refusing to deal with the individuals who do not co-operate and agree to the rules from which the President expects so much good to come.

And so we have a national code, a national agreement, a set of rules of conduct. While the farm relief legislation is getting under way, and it is well under way, that farm prices may be increased, the government has attacked the other phase of the problem, namely, relief for the millions whose lot it is to live and work in the cities. For them he is promising shorter hours of work, a retention, if not an actual increase, in pay. Of the manufacturers and the wholesalers and the retailers, the government is asking that prices be not raised beyond the necessities resulting from increased cost of raw materials and wages. In other words, the government has asked that there be no profiteering, just as it demanded during the World War that some consideration be given the consumer.

No one can predict with what success this new drive will be attended. It is new in character. It is described by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, the national recovery administrator, as an appeal to the conscience and opinion of the people and to their good instincts. I quote the general further:

"After four years of hopeless and seemingly helpless suffering and inaction it would be unforgivable not to open to the country the chance it now has under this law to unite once more and overcome and maybe to defeat the depression. This is a test of patriotism. It is the time to demonstrate the faith of our fathers and our belief in ourselves."

"We are a people disciplined by democracy to a self-control—sufficient to unite our purchasing power—our labor power—our management power to carry out this great national covenant with vigor, with determination, but with the calm composure and fair play which always mark the American way."

And true to the thought, the philosophy, of that last sentence, the government is seeking to obtain the co-operation of all of the people who must make concessions by having them make agreements with the President voluntarily. The President said when he signed the historical document that there would be no coercion. It is the American way.

In brief, the government is proposing that actual agreements will be signed by the thousands who are being asked to make concessions. The mail carriers have delivered blanks to all of them. Each blank carries a statement of fourteen points to which the employer of labor, the manufacturer of commodities for trade, the retailer or other dealer, is being asked to subscribe. They constitute the national code. It is to be effective from August 1 to December 31. By that time, it is hoped that individual industries of all kinds will have had an opportunity to work out codes, acceptable to General Johnson, that will serve as rules of principles and practice for that particular industry, whether it be for the makers of glue, molders of pottery or the manufacturer in the heavy industry such as steel. The national code is a stop-gap, a bridge for the recovery machinery to use while a permanent passage way to prosperity is being erected on a firm foundation.

Industry must pledge itself not to circumvent the agreement in any way. Labor must pledge itself to avoid disturbances resulting from its use of the strike as a weapon. State boards are being set up—they have been named in most states—to help out the national administration. Child labor is barred. A week of thirty-five hours of work is prescribed and if the establishment must stay open longer, more people can have jobs, all at the old rate of pay.

While the recovery administrator's explanation of the code said there would be no coercion, it does seem pressure will be used if the basic agreements do not come in, signed, at a rapid rate. It may not be coercion, but certainly there is a tremendous economic force to be used, for the consumers are asked to deal only with those who have signed agreements to conform.

During all of this drive to get things going again—the code calls it the "President's drive for re-employment"—there are apt to be many unfair and unjust acts by the overzealous. There are certain to be recalcitrants who are unwilling to make concessions for the common good. But the most important class of all of those who may not comply will be those who are unable to comply because, to do so, they would be bankrupt.

I have heard it suggested in conversations here that the sudden move to blanket the nation with a voluntary agreement on business conduct might cause many persons in the country to become skeptical that things were not going so well. It was feared that those without complete information as to the plans and purposes of the government might look upon the far-reaching action as meaning that a new crisis was impending. The suggestions were not altogether without supporting reason. In the deluge of visitors who have come here to draft new codes in conference with General Johnson, many have come with doubt in their mind as to the value or the justice of the whole scheme. They were honest in their judgment and simply viewed the program as unworkable and as forcing them into unnecessary hardships. It seems, therefore, that an analysis of some of the reasons for the national code should be made after it has been stated with some emphasis that there is no new crisis, nothing more serious than before, to be seen on the horizon of the immediate future.

It will be remembered that the announced program of the President when he started the recovery plan was to boost commodity prices. He wanted to see the farmers get more for their products as a means of saving agriculture from the inevitable bow-wows and he wanted the other sources of industrial life to profit. As long as prices were so low, there could be no restoration of normal business activity, in the President's view.

Carrying out this line of reasoning, there came the farm aid laws, the inflation authority, the farm and city home refinancing bills and other powers. The President withdrew government support of the dollar in foreign exchange by saying there could be no gold exported. Obviously, prices went up. They moved in a hurry. Speculation crept into the picture in a big way. The net result of this was that the cost of living moved rapidly higher but wages and salaries lagged behind.

The recovery administration thought the problem could be met by the industrial codes, but the codes were slow in getting started and numerous controversies have arisen between units of particular industries and between whole industries and the recovery administration. Delays were serving only to widen the margin between the two basic factors of wages and prices, and so General Johnson and the President put their heads together on the code which we have been discussing.

The recent nose dive in grain prices occasioned quite a bit of talk in Washington, especially around the Department of Agriculture. Secretary Wallace, however, was the calmest man of the lot. He did not let the fact disturb him that wheat dropped off 25 cents a bushel in one day for the reason, he said, that Mr. John Q. Public was gambling in the market. Sooner or later, the secretary said, John Q. had to take a licking.

Mr. Wallace said, however, that public participation in the grain market was not the sole reason for the sudden decline. He thought the rise in price had been too rapid and that a reaction had set in. Another man in the Department of Agriculture likened the price rise to the growth of bean stalks in over-rich soil. It went all to top. But the secretary said the members of the Board of Trade in Chicago saw the break coming and they sought to protect themselves by calling for more collateral or cash from those who were trading on margins. That naturally had the effect of frightening many speculators, according to Mr. Wallace, but he did not blame the Board of Trade members. It was something of a combination of circumstances, then, that broke the grain markets.

Nevertheless, the Department of Agriculture is watching the grain trading through numerous pairs of eyes. One of the things it already has done is to invoke the provisions of the grain futures law which requires the Board of Trade at Chicago to make daily reports of individual trading where the amounts are 500,000 bushels or more.

The purpose of that is to keep the department informed as to who the big speculators are, since it is conceived that a speculator can influence the market seriously with lots of about 500,000 bushels.

RENOVIZE CAMPAIGN TO AID IN RECOVERY

With the central organization of the Renovize San Mateo County campaign functioning smoothly and plans definitely formulated for the drive to be launched in the first part of August, efforts are now being centered on the creation of local organizations in sixteen separate communities in the county.

"It is upon the team-work and enthusiasm of five hundred local workers that the success of the county-wide campaign depends," declared C. C. Young, former governor and chairman of the executive committee. "An able general chairman, supported by energetic team captains and aided by the many civic workers who have indicated their enthusiasm for the movement, will have no trouble in seeing that his community secures more than its share of the million dollars in pledges set as our goal," he said.

The educational program, which is preceding the short period when team workers will personally contact property owners to secure their pledges to renovize, is meeting with enthusiastic response in all parts of the county. The demands on campaign headquarters for speakers to explain the purposes and workings of the movement, first hand, to civic and business gatherings throughout the county have kept renovize leaders busy.

"The backbone of our educational program," said Frank M. McVeigh, campaign director, "is necessarily the county newspapers, as it must be in any large publicity or advertising campaign. The number of advance pledges to renovize which have been made by property owners already, before the start of the actual drive, indicates the force with which the newspapers are actually putting over the idea of 'Renovize,' which we believe is the key to a new era of business activity."

Definite impetus was given the campaign with the start this week of actual construction on the first major renovizing project—the remodeling of a block of buildings in the Burlingame business district by the Pacific States Savings and Loan Company.

"This is an example," says Roscoe F. Byrnes, renovize leader, "on a large scale of what every property owner should do now as his share in the mass movement which will release a million dollars in trade channels, pay over seven hundred thousand dollars directly to labor, and result in an additional annual increase of twenty-five million dollars in business for the merchants, contractors, tradesmen and workers of the county."

"We don't care how small the job is, or what it is that is renovated or modernized. Paint the front porch, reshingle the roof, lay a new sidewalk, beautify your garden, install more modern plumbing or lighting fixtures, excavate your basement, install a new whole new and modern front built for your store."

"These are all expenditures which will be necessary sooner or later to preserve your investment," says Byrnes. "Have them done now while prices are lowest in fifteen years, and you will save money, and through concerted action business will regain its lost vigor. Plan to renovize now, and sign a pledge when you are called upon by a team worker."

The idea that space is only a fiction of the brain may be of comfort to those looking for a parking space.

FIRST BATTLE FLAG

The question of when and where the American flag with stars and stripes was first carried in battle has been the subject of much controversy among historians ever since the Revolution. In fact, in spite of the Betsy Ross tradition, the origin of the flag is uncertain.

It is a matter of history that the flag of thirteen stars and thirteen stripes was adopted by Congress on June 14, 1777, but the exact date on which the first flag was made is unknown. As to the flag's first display in battle, there have been conflicting claims. Until recently it was generally supposed that this occurred at Fort Schuyler, N. Y., on August 3, 1777, when the post was besieged by the British. The flag used on that occasion was said to have been made from a blue jacket and a soldier's wife's red petticoat, with stars cut from a white shirt.

War Department officials who have recently made researches with a view to clearing up the matter now declare that the evidence favors Coochs Bridge, Delaware, as the place where the first battle flag with stars and stripes was unfurled. This was during a skirmish which preceded the battle of Brandywine, and occurred on September 3, 1777.

All of which is interesting, though not of great importance. The important thing is that the Stars and Stripes still float as the symbol of freedom and equality of opportunity. The fact that the principles for which it stands are sometimes violated does not materially detract from its sublime symbolism.

FARM YOUTH PROGRESS

Rural boys and girls are far outstripping their parents in the study of improved practices in farm and home work, according to a recent announcement by the Department of Agriculture, which shows that more demonstrations have been conducted by young people's clubs than by those of adult membership.

Considerable more than half a million farm boys and girls now participate in these demonstrations, which include the raising of various crops, animal husbandry, the handling of poultry, food preparation, the designing and making of clothing, home improvement and beautification, and in fact every phase of rural life.

Instruction in these activities, imparted by farm and home demonstration agents, serves to aid these boys and girls in improving rural farm and home practices, thereby fitting them to become efficient farmers and homemakers, besides teaching them the fundamentals of public-spirited and useful citizenship.

While the enrollment and results obtained in club work are gratifying, considering the circumstances under which this effort has been put forth, the Department points out that only about one rural boy and girl in twenty has the benefit of this training at present.

Here is a field for constructive achievement which should interest all who have a regard for the importance of improving the conditions of rural living.

THE USEFUL HOBO

In the minds of most persons the terms hobo, tramp and bum have practically the same meaning. But this idea is wrong, according to M. Leinen, agent for a large New York employment company, who declares that he has hired as many as 133,000 Bowery hoboes for railroad work in a single year, and says they were "a fine bunch of men." Mr. Leinen describes the difference between the three classes mentioned somewhat as follows: A hobo is a traveling worker; a tramp is a traveling non-worker; a bum is a stationary non-worker. While the three intermingle in the large cities during the winter, and the classes are not strictly defined, when the opportunity comes the hobo is willing to work, while the others are not.

Hoboes travel from place to place, seeking seasonable employment, such as harvesting, railroad and other construction work, as common laborers, so they fill a real place in the country's economic system. While they are not always exemplary in morals and conduct, they are honest and industrious, as a rule. And they have a sense of pride as well. The hobo wants to be known as a hobo, and he is insulted when called a tramp or a bum.

THE DESTRUCTIVE RAT

Public health authorities estimate that the actual loss caused by rats in the United States amount to $400,000,000 a year, of which about one-half is for foodstuffs and the rest in the destruction of other property.

The number of rats engaged in these depredations is estimated at 120,000,000, or about equal to the country's human population.

Besides the destructiveness of the rat is its constant menace to health through the transmission of disease, especially bubonic plague, which is spread entirely by fleas which infest rats. While this disease has been held in check in countries employing preventive measures, bubonic plague killed more than 11,000,000 people in India during a twenty-year period.

The Public Health Service declares that if the extraordinarily prolific breeding of rats were not partially controlled by natural enemies, disease and the cannibalistic tendencies of the animal itself, they would soon overrun the world and exterminate man by depriving him of his sources of food.

Like many other ever-present menaces to property and health, the rat appears to be taken for granted, and seldom is any concerted effort made with a view to its extermination.

One trouble is that so many of our so-called statesmen are liberal only at the expense of someone else.

HEADLINE ENGLISH

Professors of English held a convention in Kansas City some time ago, and among other things discussed the influence of newspapers in modifying the speech of the people. As might have been expected, some felt that this influence was good, while others thought it was terrible.

In their search for short words which will fit in the limited space available to them, writers of newspaper headlines have developed a peculiarly effective, though somewhat inelegant, form of expression.

In the headlines, an investigation, of which there are many, is called a "probe," because five letters are easier to handle than thirteen. Similarly, a collision is a "crash," and agreement is a "pact," to denounce is to "flay," an explosion is a "blast," an athletic contest is a "tilt," and so on. On the sport page "journalese" does its worst.

Deploping what he considers the evil effects of newspaper English, Dr. Hopkins of the University of Kansas, said that teachers were duty-bound to take a stand against it, but significantly added: "In theory that is our stand, but it does us little good to take any stand. We might as well quit and let the language go its own way. It will anyway." And probably that covers all that is to be said on the subject.

CLASSIFYING MOTORISTS

Among the measures designed to reduce automobile accidents, a new Connecticut law will be watched with interest. It provides different insurance rates for various classes of motorists.

Those whose driving records indicate them to be especially competent and careful are granted a reduction from the regular insurance rates; those found to be involved in minor accidents and slight violations of traffic rules must pay a premium of 10 per cent; those who have had serious accidents are penalized 25 per cent, while those who are shown to have been at fault in highly serious accidents must pay an additional premium of 50 per cent for their insurance.

The new law has not been in effect long enough to enable one to judge of its results, but it seems to be based upon sound principles and may prove to be of some measurable benefit in reducing automobile accidents.

A Kentucky mare learned to stop at a red light and go ahead on a green one, whereby she lived to be 37 years old. Many humans never develop that much horse sense.

It is estimated that only 40 per cent of persons have bath tubs. But perhaps the other 60 per cent have no urge to sing.

EAGLES DEFEAT OCEAN VIEW TEAM

The Ocean View Athletic Club team scored three runs on one hit and a couple of errors in the very first inning last Sunday. After that it was just too bad for them. Coming to bat in their half of the same inning the Daly City Eagles team, with two walks and four hits, scored a total of six runs.

Gus Ford started the pitching for the Eagles, but had to leave the game after the first inning with a wrenched leg. Jackie Gerstenberg, who pitched the last eight innings for the Eagles, held the opposition to three scattered hits. Here is another Jefferson high school boy who may go places in baseball, being possessed of a strong throwing arm and natural baseball instinct.

Petrocchi featured with two long triples and a single, Smith connected for a long home run with bases full, besides catching a snappy game. Roy Kelly's work featured for the Ocean View boys. He connected for three of his team's four hits.
